

Longhorn Orientation

Orientation

Longhorn Orientation programs are designed to aid in the transition of all newly admitted undergraduate students into the academic and social climate of the University. Longhorn Orientation programming serves new freshman and transfer students by: acclimating them to the campus and surrounding community; providing information and assistance concerning academic policies, procedures, requirements, and class registration; serving as a campus information and referral agent; and hosting opportunities for campus offices and organizations to interact with new students through programs and events. Longhorn Orientation strives to provide a holistic, encompassing student development approach to achieve goals that ultimately support the missions of the University. Program fees provide the budget for student programs and services coordinated by the unit.
